

FOREWORD

This handbook is intended to provide a wide range of statistics of general interest on the Cuban economy in a convenient format. Most of the statistics cover the periods 1955-58 and 1961-67. Statistics for 1959 and 1960—the two years immediately following the revolution in January 1959—are excluded because of the scarcity and unreliability of information. For similar reasons, the statistics for 1961 are the least reliable of the series shown and should be used with caution.

The statistics were obtained from a wide variety of sources. They have been checked carefully for internal consistency and, on the whole, are judged to be reasonably reliable. Most reliable are the statistics on foreign trade, for which cross checks with the statistics of Cuba's trading partners were made.

The data on the production of most sectors of the economy also are fairly reliable, those on the production and disposition of sugar being the most accurate. The data on the output of manufactured products also are numerically accurate, but their significance is impaired somewhat by a decline in the quality of many manufactured goods since the revolution. The data on the production of food crops in the years since the revolution refer only to state collections. In the aggregative measure of agricultural output, however, data on state collections were supplemented by estimates of consumption by farm households and of private sales. These estimates are based on information on food consumption for a sample of farm families and on the volume of black market food sales.

Statistics on drawings of credits extended by Communist countries were derived from the commodity trade deficits, taking account of estimated Cuban expenditures for invisibles such as the wages of technicians supplied by Communist countries and movements of short-term capital. The allocation of drawings between development aid and balance-of-payments credits, however, is only a rough approximation.

Estimates of gross domestic product (GDP) by sector of origin and by expenditure category in current prices were derived from a variety of sources, including estimates of the UN Economic Commission for Latin America that were based on data supplied by the Cuban government. A first approximation of GDP in constant (1957) prices was obtained by constructing volume indexes for each sector of origin. These estimates of GDP were then adjusted downward on the basis of independent estimates of GDP for 1965-66 by expenditure category in 1957 prices. The adjustments were applied to the estimates for industry and agriculture (both excluding sugar) and for services—which are most subject to upward bias.

Although the overall classification of this handbook is SECRET/NO FOREIGN DISSEM, some of the tables are unclassified. Therefore, each of the tables carries a footnote which specifies the classification.

^b Estimated.

^c Equals raw sugar produced plus the raw sugar equivalent of refined sugar produced. Refined sugar is converted to a raw sugar basis by applying the factor 92 parts refined to 100 parts raw. Because the production data in this table refer to calendar years, they differ in some instances from the data for crop years in Table 6.

^d During 1961-67, virtually all of the production in this category consisted of blackstrap molasses. In 1955, 1956, and 1958, however, between 30 and 55 percent of production was accounted for by rich inverted molasses plus a small volume of syrup.

^b State-owned carriers only. Small amounts of freight were handled by private carriers.

^a Common carriers only. The sugar mill railroad systems sometimes employ the common carrier tracks for short distances. Because of the short haul, however, revenue from this traffic is negligible, and, therefore, sugarcane has been excluded.

* All data in this table are unclassified. Data for imports are those reported by the importing countries. In most cases, these figures differ little from the export data reported by Cuba which are shown in Table 29. Data for re-exports were estimated as follows: for those countries having net exports of sugar, all sugar imports from Cuba were regarded as re-exported; for those countries having net imports of sugar, all sugar exports were regarded as re-exports and the share of Cuban sugar in these re-exports was estimated as that proportion of the countries' total sugar imports obtained from Cuba. Data for imports are rounded to the nearest five thousand metric tons and data for re-exports are rounded to the nearest ten thousand metric tons.

^b The official exchange rate is one peso per US dollar.

^c In the case of the USSR, balance-of-payments credits are shown as extended during the period in which the trade deficit to be financed was accumulated. In some cases, formalization of the credit did not take place until the year following that in which the deficit occurred.

^a All data in this table are unclassified. The projects listed were supplied with equipment imported from the indicated donor country; in most instances, all or part of the foreign exchange costs of the project were financed with credits from the donor country.

^b Values represent the total cost of the projects, including the local construction costs.

^c Only three of the four planned 50-megawatt generators were in operation at the end of 1967. The fourth generator was scheduled to begin operation in early 1968.

^a All data in this table are unclassified. Figures include unemployed and underemployed members of the labor force. Both unemployment and underemployment were extensive before the revolution but have declined considerably since then. No reliable figures are available on the extent of either unemployment or underemployment.

^b The data represent the distribution of the permanent labor force. Since 1962, large numbers of persons have been recruited each year from other sectors of the economy for short periods of work in agriculture.
